President's Spotlight

For the second time in three months, the Federal Reserve increased its benchmark interest rate a quarter point on March 15. All speculation is that the Fed is on a likely path for regular rate hikes.

What does this mean for you? If you are a saver, you'll start to see slightly larger interest bumps. But, if you're in the market for a new home, car or any other lending needs, now is the time to act. We are all used to loan rates being at historic lows and the "game" was to wait it out to see how low of a rate you could get. The rules are changing. There is no sign of rates falling in the near future. The new "game" is to close your loan before they go up again.

Our mission is to enhance your financial well-being. As a not-for-profit, member-owned credit union, we always strive to give you the best pricing possible. But as the Fed acts, so must we. My advice: If you have money to invest, the future is getting brighter. Bring it in now. If you need to borrow money, now is the best time. In short ... don't wait.
